

Now think about how you would structure a response to the question? Here it is again:

Explore Shakespeare's presentation of betrayal in Othello. You must relate your discussion to relevant contextual factors and ideas from your critical reading.

1. Make a plan. Cite 5 different points you want to cover.

2. Write an introduction for this question, using your earlier definition of key terms and exploring the presentation options.

3. Find suitable quotes (1 main and at least 1 supporting) for each of the 5 points you have listed above.

4. Now write up one point. Use the following checklist to ensure you have developed your answer effectively:
- a. Clear initial topic sentence?
  - b. Clear reference to question and development of your argument in response?
  - c. Main and supporting quote?
  - d. Discussion of presentation (how/when/who/what LINKED to meaning/impact/effect on audience)?
  - e. Integrated discussion of relevant context (as a way of strengthening evaluation of impact)?
  - f. Reference to genre of tragedy and conventions?
  - g. Evaluation of at least one critical response/alternative reading?
