Voter à 16 ans

Traduis le passage en français

Since the legal voting age was lowered in Austria in 2007, it is often challenged in France. Should 16-18 year olds be able to vote? The majority of French people think that young people lack maturity and that they are not yet interested enough to go and vote. According to them, at 16, one is too influenced by one's family and conditioned to think like one's parents. Young people tend to agree that they lack knowledge in the topic but most of them would like to gain a better understanding of the political system and the possibility to express their opinions through voting.
